Frank I. Frayne and his company will play "Diogenes, the Tramp" at both performances at the Park to-day, but there will be a change of bill to-morrow afternoon. "Kentucky Bill," a highly sensational drama, will then be presented. The piece was seen here last season.

"The Stowaway," that has had a great success in its presentation elsewhere, is to be put on at the Grand Opera-house next Monday night. In the second act a safe will be robbed by men who, it is claimed, have been burglars. They have a complete outfit of burglars' tools, with which they do their stage work. do their stage work.

A Gun Club's Practice Shoot. Some of the members of the Capital City Gun Club celebrated Christmas by a practice shoot at Brighton Beach, where there was quite a crowd of spectators. Five traps were used, and the objects were live pigeons and English sparrows, 150 of the former and 200 of the latter. The day was an excellent one for the sport, and the birds trapped well. Some excellent shooting was done by George Beck, Omar Porter, Dr. Britton, W. D. Allen, Thomas Taggart and others. The rise was twenty-six yards for the sparrows and thirty for the pigeons.

A Switchman Killed.

James Scanlan, a switchman, was killed yesterday afternoon while at work in the Panhandle yards. He was trying to fix a draw-bar between two cars, when an engine struck them, throwing Scanlan for-ward to the ground, breaking his neck. Flanner & Buchanan took Scanlan's body to his home, 156 West McCarty street.

HOLIDAY FRIDAY AMENITIES OF THE SEASON

The Holiday That Brings Good Cheer to Homes Throughout Christendom.

Greetings and Giving Marked by Offerings of the Charitable-Exercises at State and County Institutions-Notes of the Day.

ANOTHER CHRISTMAS GONE.

General Observance of the Day Throughout the City. There was nothing in the weather yesterday to indicate that it was Christmas day. Mr. Wappenhans, the local observer of the signal service, divided his attention Tuesday night between answering telephone calls and trying to persuade the atmospheric powers to send a little snow. It was a desperate night he spent, but it availed nothing, and as he turned the key in his door to go home he muttered to himself: "Well. it is no use. I can scare the people, but I can't make it snow."

But in all other respects it was a typical Christmas. It requires no sleighing, no ice, and no falling snow to remind the people of the beautiful sentiments and the sacred memories that cluster about this day. It was looked upon as have been many others in the past—as a day when no place is so fitting as home. Thanksgiving is a day of rejoicing, but Christmas is more—it is a day when domestic ties are drawn more closely together in the common thought of general happiness. Hence, to have seen fully the manner in which the citizens of Indianapolis occupied their time yesterday, one should have gone their time yesterday, one should have gone into the thousands of homes and there witnessed the scenes of rejoicing.

After Tuesday night the spirit of the time centered around the homes and the institutions where the day's festivities were held, but a few business houses were open yesterday morning to accommodate the late buyer. The dealers say that never before had so much been sold up to Christmas day to be followed by an almost immediate cessation of purchases. For two weeks an immense amount of buying was done, and especially were the stores active on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday. On Tuesday night many of them were blockaded, and the principal thoroughfares were thronged with people until a late hour, but yesterday a marked change was manifest. Incoming trains were crowded, but the passengers hurried at once to the places they were to join. Men went to their offices early to catch their morning correspondence, attended to it in as short a time as possible and at once hastened back to their families. Noon seemed to be the almost universally accepted hour for dinner. Unlike the custom on Thanksgiving day, but few families dined at the hotels, and in addition the leading houses had only a fair run of transient guests. With all the merriment that accompanied the day, the thoughts of the truly Christian turned to the thousands of poor and suffering. The charity organizations and hundreds of families did a great deal in supplying the wants of many, but to reach all was an impossibility. Many more would have had a share of the day's good cheer had their exact location been known, and, if charity failed yesterday, it was through no desire on the part of the people to neglect the unfortunate. The per cent. of men, women and children whose tables were bare yesterday was not as large as it was a year ago, it is said. Even a decrease in suffering, no matter how little it may be, is a pleasant reminder that Christmas-time is gradually becoming one when enjoyment reaches nearly every home. done, and especially were the stores active Restored to the Widow. Yesterday was a happy day in a little cottage, No. 257 West Sixth street, this city, the residence of Mrs. Taylor, widow of Rev. Marshall W. Taylor, D. D., late editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate. Dr. Taylor was well known to many in this city as the first colored man who arose to prominent position in the Methodist Episcopal Church, acquiring some distinction as a preacher and writer. At the time of his death he had a small homestead, as above mentioned, on which there was an indebtedness of $1,750, besides interest. Mrs. Taylor, having three small children, could not meet this obligation, but Dr. Gilbert devised a plan for her assistance. It was determined to solicit the amount from benevolent people, and place Dr. Taylor's library as a memorial in the university at New Orleans. Two years and more have passed away. Small sums received from time to time were applied to take up the notes as they matured. Yesterday the last sum was paid, and, in the presence of a small company, the discharged mortgage was presented to the widow and her children. Benjamin T. Thornton, the mortgagee, donated $50 of the claim. editor of the Southwestern Christian Admortgagee, donated $50 of the claim.

Amusement Notes.

"Erminie," one of the brightest of the many light operas, and always popular here, will be produced at the Grand Operahouse to-night, where the Aronson company, from the New York Casino, will begin a limited engagement. This opera has been presented on the local stage several times and a sa work of unusual merit. The organization that is to produce it is large and well balanced. It has handsome costumes and a carefully drilled and efficient chorus. In addition its orchestra is good and the company will give a strong performance, as all these details will be supplemented by fine stage effects. "Erminie" will be repeated at the matinee, while "Nadiy," a new opera to Indianapolis, is amounced for Friday and Saturday nights.

"The Paymaster," a semi-sensational play, with numerous stirring scenes and incidents, will be the New, Year's attraction at English's Opera-house. Duncan B. Harison is the star. The engagement will open with a matinee Wednesday afternoon next.

Frank I. Frayne and his company will play "Diogenes, the Tramp" at both performances at the Park to-day, but there will be a change of bill to-morrow afternoon. "Kentucky Bill," a highly sensadisplayed. But the actual celebration the same tables. As the number of insane is about sixteen hundred and that of the employes about four hundred, there were thus fed, at one time, about 2,000 persons. It was a remarkable sight to see so large a body of presumably uncontrollable people quietly enjoying a holiday feast with nothing but evidences of thorough pleasure and appreciation. The dinner was a great success, the tables being beautifully dressed with flowers and other adornment. They were, besides, filled with all that the appetite could desire. Turkey, oysters, meats of various kinds, vegetables, jellies, fruit, puddings and pies were nicely served, and in abundance. Of turkeys alone over 1,600 pounds were prepared, and more than 1,600 pounds were prepared, and more than 600 pounds of candy were distributed. Beginning an hour later an entertain-ment, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, tableaux, etc., was given in the chapel of the female department. It was participated in by a number of the patients and some of the hospital employes, as well as other friends. The whole was under the immediate management of H. D. Fletcher, master of amusements of the hospital, assisted by other attaches of the institution. The evidences of the enjoyment of the audience, composed alike of the patients and their friends, were frequent and decided, and it was difficult for the visitor to distinguish the two elements of the assembled. of the assemblage. The appreciation of to give up his room to me, an offer which I merit and wit, as expressed by frequent accepted without delay. The room was merit and wit, as expressed by frequent applause and laughter, was keen and quick, and the entertainment was closely fol-lowed. A stump speech by R. J. were also much appreciated, indicating that that crankism may have aided in filling the hospitals of the country.

The whole day was made as bright as possible for the unfortunate inmates, and the very successful celebration brought to Dr. Wright and his assistants many congratulations gratulations. The Blind Wards of the State. The sightless ones at the Institution for the Education of the Blind were not forgotten during yesterday's universal merrymaking. Kind and sympathetic hands had the institution, and, when the children trooped down to breakfast, their cheers and clapping of hands was a hearty tribute to the kind superintendent and his assistants. At the side of the plate of each boy and girl had been placed a present consisting of toys and candies. During the morning the scholars participated in some very prettily arranged Christmas exercises, during which music befitting the sentiment of the day was given upon the organ by of the day was given upon the organ by Prof. R. A. Newland and Miss H. H. Hanvey. Recitations were delivered by the children, and responsive readings were given in which the teachers and officers took part. At 1 o'clock a turkey dinner was spread, and the children thoroughly enjoyed it. The afternoon was spent by the children in various past mes and games. Besides the presents supplied by the super-intendent and other officers of the institu-tion, several charitably disposed persons sent suitable gifts.

The Colored Orphans. The little ones at the Home for Friendless Colored Children had a pleasurable Christmas. There was no Santa Claus, but every one of the fifty-nine children, twenty-two of whom are girls and the remainder boys, had presents on their desks in the schoolrooms or at their places in the nursery. each child having at least three presents, beside quite a number that will be used and enjoyed in common. There were Co. thirty pounds of candy, which came in with donations from other charitable persons. The festivities of the day closed with a magic-lantern show.

Frank Mans yesterday gave each of the workmen at his brewery a five-dollar gold piece. Each one of the office men also received from him a ten-dollar piece. There were large audiences at all the theaters yesterday afternoon, and in the evening each house had only standing room, and very little of that, left for late

The free dinner given in Indianola yesterday, by Mr. and Mrs. Alland, at Bethesda Chapel, was in every way a success. There were fifty-one children and twenty grown persons there, and every one had a good time. There was candy all round, and each girl received a nice handkerchief. The supplies were collected from charitable persons in this city, and they certainly went to make one happy day for children who are not accustomed to feasting.

A South-side youngster, who has great faith in the reality of the Santa Claus legend, attended a church Christmas festival, the other evening. There he saw what he believed to be a veritable Santa Claus, come out of a huge chimney and fire-place, and distribute his gifts to the assembled little ones. Upon his return home his mother noticed that he seemed worried about something, but he declined to tell his troubles until just before going to bed, when his face brightened. "Mamma," he said, "Santa Claus is too big to get down our chimneys, and I'm afraid he won't come here. Won't you please let the big transom over the door stay open to-night?" The transom remained open, and it is needless to say the child believes it resulted in bringing him the toys and other things he found enjoyment in the next morning.

IN THE HOTEL LOBBY.

Travelers Who Had Something to Say About How They Passed Christmas Day.

The actor is favored with no more of a Christmas than the morning newspaper man, but it isn't that fact which caused the members of the "Sweet Lavender" Company to grumble last hight. It was the jump they were forced to make to Detroit, where they finish the week. Leaving at 11:50 o'clock they had to change cars at 2 o'clock this morning at Lafayette, with no certainty of getting a sleeper there, and the prospect gave them anything but a cheerful cast of countenance. It was an unpleasant termination of a busy and not very merry Christmas.

"I had rather a funny Christmas experience a year ago," remarked a traveling man, at the Bates House, last night. "It was out in Oskaloosa, Ia., at a hotel called the Downing House. I arrived there Christmas night, and found the hotel full and running over—not a room left. As it was the only house of any consequence in the place. I had to make some sort of a deal for a place to sleep, and was just meditating what to do when the son of the proprietor volunteered to give up his room. about 10x8, decorated with cigarette pictures and with a beautiful Turkish bath atmosphere, though the weather outside was bitterly cold. This was due to the creation, especially evoked applause, and its conclusion, a scatting disquisition on "the dude," brought down the house. A heat for the whole house. Well, I hoisted number of base-ball scenes in tableaux the window as high as it would go, and found even a sheet too heavy covering for the bed, though the foot of the latter nearly touched the window-sill. It was the only Christmas night I ever put in under such caloric circumstances, and in the morning I could scarcely believe it was cold until I had gone out and frosted my ears, such was the high temperature of that room."

"What indelibly fixes last Christmas in my memory," said another traveling man in the group, "is a woman with five children who tried to ride from gaily decorated the large dining-room of | Leavenworth, Kan., to Kansas City on one ticket. It was on the Missouri Pacific, and the conductor was a good-natured fellow, but the look of perplexity which came over his face as he sized up the woman's one ticket and the five children, one or two of them over the limit of no-fare age, was funny. Two of them were jammed in the seat with their mether, and the other three were in the seat just behind, all as serious as church deacons. 'I'll have to have half fare for this boy,' said the good-natured conductor, mildly.
"'What's that—half fare?' replied the woman, sharply.

"'Sure,' answered the conductor. 'He's over the limit, that's plain.'

"With an angry look at the boy in question, the woman counted out the money, and. the conductor had passed on, turned to the youngster and snapped out, 'I'll fix you when we get home. Why didn't you huddle down there and look younger?' Imagine the pleasant Christmas reflections that boy must have had as he bowled along rapidly towards a certain thrashing."

A Feast for the Prisoners at the Jail. Special preparations for a Christmas dinner were made at the county jail, and the prisoners, to the number of forty-eight, were bountifully served with turkey and its usual accompaniment, cranberry sance. Dinner over, good eigars were supplied through the kindness of the day turnkey. Dinner over, good eigars were supplied through the kindness of the day turnkey way within jaile discipline, and games of cards and dominoes were indulged in. No special religious services were held, but at the dinner table Sam Rivers, under sentence for counterficiting, offered a lengthy prayer. Rivers has quite a ministerial appearance, and it is said he has occupied bulpits in several small towns. Murderer Azman spent today apart from the other prisoners, talking to his faithful wife, who had come from the other prisoners, talking to his faithful wife, who had come from the other prisoners to the forts made to entertain them.

The Indiana convention of colored people, to select delegates to the Afro-American Convention, which will take place in Chicago, will meet this morning, at 10 o'clock, in the Criminal Court room.
